WATERBURY

Further Particulars Regarding Howard G. Arms.

Hartford and Bristol, Conn., papers received tell much of the illness and life of Howard G. Arms, called by the Hartford paper, "Bristol's most popular citizen." Mr. Arms had a fine presence, always vigorous and hearty, seldom troubled by illness and his death came as a great shock. Mr. Arms was ill only a little over a week and was carried on Tuesday, Nov. 30, to the Hartford hospital, where he underwent an operation for diverticulitis. He rallied from the operation, but later suffered a relapse and his strength gradually failed to the last. He arranged all his affairs. Saturday morning he was told he had 12 hours to live. His immediate family was with him, but he felt he must see his parents, and although 87 and 89 years of age they made the trip from Bristol to see him.

The funeral was held from the Baptist church in Bristol Tuesday afternoon, the service being conducted by the pastor, Rev. H. D. Coe, assisted by Rev. Walter Beanson of the Advent church. Burial was with Masonic honors and Rev. H. S. Still of the Forestville Methodist church acted as chaplain. The city officials, the fire department and the Bristol lodge of Elks attended in a body. The bearers were former associates on the city council, B. P. Webster, W. P. Stone, Jr., John Donnelly, S. J. Large, J. H. Gleason and Frank W. Dutton.

Mr. Arms was born in Waterbury on March 28, 1855. He attended the schools here and the Green Mountain seminary at Waterbury Center. He worked for a time in his father's marble works in town and afterward went to Cooper institute, to New York City, to study art. He also attended the Academy of Design in New York City, taking up crayon portrait work. He returned to Vermont, but within a year moved with his parents to Bristol. He then took up his work of drawing portraits and became one of the best in that section. His work was all free-hand crayons, mostly done from small cabinet pictures. He would work with his crayons during the winter and then assist his father in the marble works in the summer, as he was an excellent marble cutter. For several years he served Bristol as a constable. In 1894 he became chief of police, resigning in 1906 to take over the business of his father, who retired. Chief Arms was known far and wide as a capable, efficient officer and as one having a special capacity for detective work. Suspects often confessed to him matters they persistently refused to disclose to other officials. He was also chief of the fire department for a number of years. In 1909 Mr. Arms was elected a member of the board of selectmen and when the city was established he was elected a member of the city council, where he served two terms, declining a re-election last fall that he might devote all his time to business.

He was a member of Franklin lodge, F. and A. M., Pequabuck chapter, R. A. M., Ionic council, R. and S. M., Bristol lodge of Elks, Stephen Terry lodge of Odd Fellows, Fraternal Benevolent league and the United Order of Workmen. The tributes of friends as printed by his fellow workers are very beautiful.

Besides the relatives which a previous report mentioned as surviving the deceased, are two grandchildren.
